

Some Speak of the Future

Some Speak of the Future is a duo from Copenhagen, Denmark, consisting of Lauritz Carlsen and Astrid Myrup. During these past few years, they have played at a majority of the indie venues in Copenhagen, released two well-received albums, and appeared at the acclaimed Danish music festival SPOT'11. For the last 4 months they have lived in Berlin and explored the vibrant music scene. During this time they have played concerts at Berlin venues such as Schokoladen, Intersoup and Café Gaudy.

Melancholy is at the centre of Some Speak of the Future's pleasant indie-folk universe, where the songs are driven by the acoustic guitar and insistent two-part vocals. Reviewers have called their music "the perfect soundtrack for a rainy day", and though the songs are delivered with power and conviction, there is no doubt that intimacy reigns here.
